GENERAL NEWS.

A Terrible State of Affairs Reported in the South.

THE NUMBER OF DISTRICTS GREATLY UNDERESTIMATED.

Another of the Missouri Train Robbers Arrested—Fatal Cross Fire for the Murder of Spotted Tail.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

Memphis, March 30.—[Special.]—Advices from the interior of Arkansas, received at the Gazette office, state that the condition of affairs in the Mississippi bottom counties is worse than was at first supposed. Reports from Chicot county say that the people are in a state of starvation. A letter from Lake Village, the county seat of Chicot county, says: "Hundreds are starving, and will soon die unless relief comes. Many families have been without bread for days, and are living on parched corn and meal. Some have not even that, and are living on roots and herbs. Many are sick, and the mortality will be fearful. Every day we have from ten to fifteen deaths, and the number is increasing. Many have died from starvation, and the disease is spreading. Unless relief comes at once, hundreds will die. Some have left their homes, and are wandering about the country, begging for food. Many are leaving the county, and the exodus will be great. Those who remain will be helpless, and must perish. Relief must come at once, or it will be too late. Hundreds are now in need of provisions, and the number is daily increasing. Many Martinez, in his letter to Hirl, under date of Dec. [illegible], of Chili at Washington, D. C., Nov. 25, 1881, says: "I forgot to say to tell you what one of my friends in New York had communicated to me. He tells me that Mr. Adams, minister of the United States to Bolivia, had given out that he carried instructions of great severity against Chileans, and he added that country. He added that in the opinion Chili could not [illegible] for any other to protect [illegible] than so far as the 2d corner, and that it was necessary to have the guano and saltpetre worked by American company. I tell you what they have told me, but I also find by information that [illegible] the spectre of the Peruvian company.

The Wasco county horror appears even more horrible than as first reported. There was no evidence at all to indicate that Harrison [illegible] any share in the murder, and the [illegible] seems to have been nothing more or less than a deliberate and vicious murder. He was dragged by the neck after a swift horse four or five hundred yards and then, probably after having been choked to death, hanged from a bridge.

The St. Paul Pioneer-Press, considering the "life, liberty and pursuit of [illegible]" argument as favoring Chinese immigration, says: "It is a misconception to think of the United States as if it were the stomach of an ostrich, to receive all kinds of substances from any of the three natural kingdoms."

WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

Hints and Gossip for Certain Feminine Dress and Conduct.

The ingenuity of Worth in the arrangement of a lady's dress is now placed in requisition and worked out with a skill and taste to meet the wonted requirements of it.

There are three points in the chief interest of the dress we wish to call attention to. It is not an actual novelty, but it is one of several modifications of previous styles, all having in common a certain degree of picturesqueness and originality, and all tending to the same end—the concentration of interest and attention upon the upper part of the person. The first of these points is the sash, which is now worn as broad as it can be without losing its character as a sash, and is tied in a large bow behind, with long ends. The second is the collar, which has become a very important feature in the dress, and is made of all sorts of materials, from the richest to the most inexpensive. The third is the cuff, which is also made of all sorts of materials, and is worn of all sizes, from the tight wristband to the elaborate cuff that reaches to the elbow. Of course, all these points can be varied to suit the taste of the wearer, and the result is that no two dresses are exactly alike, and that each lady can have a dress of her own, which is not a copy of any other dress. This is a great gain, and one which will be appreciated by all who have studied the question of dress, and who have noticed how much the effect of a dress depends upon the proper proportioning of its parts. The sash, collar and cuffs are the three points which are now under the control of the dressmaker, and which she can vary to suit the figure of her customer. The sash can be worn high or low, broad or narrow, and tied in a bow with short or long ends. The collar can be high or low, and of any shape that may be desired. The cuffs can be long or short, and of any shape that may be desired. Thus the dressmaker has the means of producing a dress which will be in accordance with the figure of her customer, and which will be in harmony with the style of her face
